Broward Center presents

Richie Havens

Sunday, January 17, 2010 at 7:00 PM

Amaturo Theater

Richie Havens rose to prominence when his riveting performance at the Woodstock Festival captured the spirit of a generation. Since then he's had a prolific career as a soulful songwriter, singer, actor and activist with a unique sound. His covers of pop and folk songs and his intense rhythm guitar style are still one of the most recognizable voices in modern music. From "Freedom," his improvised version of "Motherless Child," to popular renditions of "Here Comes the Sun" and "Just Like a Woman," he still embodies a sense of universal compassion and brotherhood while garnering ovations everywhere he performs. From the folk houses of Greenwich Village to Presidential inaugurations, his haunting tunes and masterful guitar continues to inspire and ignite audiences with his timeless interpretations of classics and his own compositions. Now, this gifted artist who ushered in the era of Woodstock is back in Broward, performing in the intimate setting of the Amaturo Theater. Don't miss a chance to sing along with this musical icon whose version of "Here Comes the Sun" will forever assure us that all is indeed, alright.
